indicate that the officers as a whole have not realised the importance of inspection work. The most weighty justification in favour of the retention of the posts of Regional Deputy Directors is that they afford a very necessary machinery for effective supervision of the district staff. The Government consider that there can therefore be hardly any valid excuse for negligence in inspecting subordinate officers. The Director of Agriculture is therefore requested to issue necessary instructions to the Regional Deputy Directors of Agriculture impressing on them the importance, Government attach to the periodical inspection of subordinate offices and warning them that negligence on their part in this regard will be viewed very severely.
